

Kenyon

GREAT NORTH AMERICAN

ECLIPSE

UNIVERSITY OF SOUTHERN INDIANA

Eclipse Math

Eclipse

Problem 1 - Get ready to crunch some numbers

The graphic consists of several horizontal bands of color. From top to bottom, the colors transition from yellow to green, then to a mix of blue and purple, and finally to a dark purple at the bottom. The bands have a textured, almost pixelated appearance, with some areas appearing more saturated than others. The overall effect is reminiscent of a digital or data visualization style.

Exterior view

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

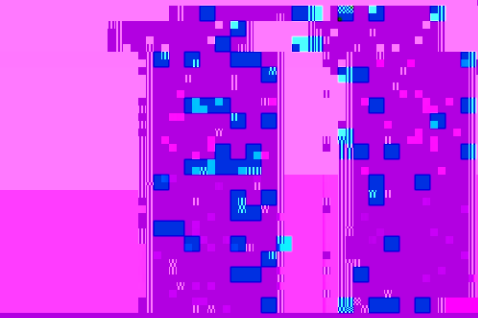

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

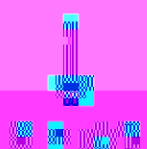

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Exterior view of the building, showing the glass facade and the central tower.

Let us see how the path of totality stretches from Easter Day, 1999, to the day of the total eclipse of the sun on August 11, 2008.

Stretch from Easter Day, 1999, to the day of the total eclipse of the sun on August 11, 2008.

Stretch from Easter Day, 1999, to the day of the total eclipse of the sun on August 11, 2008.

Stretch from Easter Day, 1999, to the day of the total eclipse of the sun on August 11, 2008.

