Dr. Paul A. Kuban, associate professor of engineering in the Pott College of Science, Engineering, and Education, will address the 2012 fall graduates during the two ceremonies today.

He was selected as the speaker because he received the Distinguished Professor Award at the 2012 Spring Commencement. According to USI tradition, the Distinguished Professor delivers the fall Commencement address.

Faculty colleagues selected Dr. Kuban as Distinguished Professor for his achievements in scholarship, teaching, and University and community service. He specializes in digital logic design, embedded systems development, and Supervisory Control And Data Acquisition (SCADA) system integration. His industry experience includes digital signal processing (DSP) software design and distributed control system (DCS) deployment.

In addition to teaching, he advises students and supervises student design projects. He is the faculty sponsor for the student chapter of

The impact of USI's focus can be seen most dramatically in the rise in regional college-going attendance, from 33 percent of public high school graduates in 1985 when USI was established as a separate state institution, to 85 percent in 2011. These gains outpace both state and national averages and speak to the strong partnership USI established

President Linda L. M. Bennett became the third president of the University of Southern Indiana in 2009. In her inaugural address, she referenced the University's founding in 1965 and said, "Service to a greater good was a primary reason the University of Southern Indiana was created. It is our touchstone, and years after our founding and emergence as a separate state University, there is little doubt that USI is delivering on the promise of its founding."

USI began as a regional campus administered by Indiana State University. During the initial 20 years, the institution experienced enrollment growth and developed under an administration led by President David L. Rice with faculty dedicated to teaching and serving the community. Dr. Rice's vision of public higher education led to the modern, thriving institution we know today.

The institution started with 412 students and increased steadily to 2,420 students by 1985. In the next two decades, growth continued as the institution's name changed to the University of Southern Indiana and the student population grew to more than 10,000 students by 2004. More buildings opened including student apartments, residence halls, a fitness, wellness, and recreation center, an Education Center and Torrington Science Center wing, and Rice Library, named in honor of the University's first president.

Presidential Medallion

During the Middle Ages, medallions signified membership in religious orders and guilds; in the Renaissance, membership in elite orders of knighthood and prominence in government office. Today, colleges and universities strike medallions to commemorate important events and achievements. Donated by the late Melvin Denner, professor emeritus of biology, and Anne Denner, former instructor in nutrition and biology, and their family, this medallion was fabricated by Honorcraft for the 1995 inauguration of H. Ray Hoops. Dr. Denner served as grand marshal at the University's first inauguration.

Academic Regalia

The academic costume dates from medieval days when university students wore woolen and fur garments for warmth in damp and drafty buildings. Most of those studying were clerics in holy orders; they wore a cloak to which was attached a hood that could be pulled up to cover their tonsured heads. Simplified today, the costume serves to remind us that its wearer is a member of an ancient and venerable profession; it also indicates by its color and design the wearer's degree and the institution by which the degree was conferred.

In the United States, black has been the traditional color for academic gowns, but some institutions authorize holders of their doctorates to wear colors of the institution. The bachelor's gown is distinguished by its long, open sleeves; the master's by ity ii[(i)19.6(t)10..n se 579(g)-20.3c9.2(a)-20.3(s)4.2(t)7.1_n3
